WEEK IN OXFORD CO.

Mrs. Gladys Conant, Canton, and Mrs. Irene Noyes, Roxbury, represented Oxford County at the 37th annual conference of the National Extension Homemakers Council at Michigan State University the week of Aug. 12.

The trustees of the Paris Utility District signed three contracts totaling $3,500.00 with Cianbro Corp., Bangor, for the construction of a water pollution control facility, interceptor and lateral sewers, a pumping station and force main. Construction is scheduled to begin in a month and will be completed in early 1975. The project is being funded by a $3,540,000 grant from the Environmental Protection Agency, a $170,000 grant from the State, and $2,700,000 from the Paris Utility District and contributing industries. The local share will be financed by an FHA loan.

Scott "Sooty" Greig, 16, of Hartland will exhibit his grand champion steer at Lewiston Fair, Oxford County Fair at Norway and the final show and bidding at Fryeburg Fair. The steer weighs 780 pounds. It is estimated that 25 hours have been spent in searching over 200 acres of land on Route 26 in the Hopedale vicinity (Welchville) in an effort to locate two bodies a teenage girl reported to have been immersed in a small body of water in the area. A helicopter has been used in the search. No bodies have been found. It is reported that the bodies will be searched later in the week when the foliage has thinned.

The Mexico High School Class of 1973 held its 47th reunion Aug. 18 at the camp of Alton Hutchinson in Bethel. An outdoor smorgasbord luncheon was enjoyed at noon. Games were made to hold future reunions at the same place.

COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The town office has been presented with the Boston Post Gold Cane to be given to the oldest person in town. We need to be sure who that person is. Any information we receive will be appreciated. If a person was not born in Bethel we would have no record here in the office.

At a meeting of the Health Council last week, Dr. Rex Martin, who purchased Dr. Harrell's office, announced he would place the facility on the market this fall. He is going to devote his time to his practice in Harrison. There is to be a meeting with representatives of the Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway to see if some coverage can be arranged with members of their staff. There is a possibility the office could be purchased for that purpose.

EMERGENCY CONSERVATION ASSISTANCE OFFERED IN OXFORD COUNTY

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is offering emergency conservation assistance in Oxford County to help repair farmland damages caused by flooding. Aroostook and Washington counties were designated eligible for aid under the program earlier. An allocation of funds has been made to the Oxford County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation, (ASC) committee for use for conservation restoration practices. This allocation will be used to share with farmers in the county on a nondiscriminatory basis the cost of removing debris from farmland, grading and shaping eroded land areas and restoring drainage systems and other similar installations. Repair measures are subject to approval of state and county ASC Committees.

Charles A. Fillebrown, Chairman of the Oxford County ASC Committee has announced that requests for cost-sharing assistance must be filed by September 15 by farmers who, of necessity, have started or completed restoration work. Where work has not been started, the county committee will accept requests through Sept. 30, 1973. Requests will be accepted in person at the ASC Office, 26 Market Square, South Paris or by calling 743-2041. Farmers are urged to file their requests as soon as possible.

Emergency conservation assistance is designed to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to alleviate conditions resulting from natural disasters and to restore agricultural land to productive capacity. With no immediate relief in prospect, a third group of White Mountain National Forest personnel has been placed on "alert" for possible dispatch to the emergency area. It is hoped that it will not be necessary to send more manpower, but the people are ready if needed. The job of controlling and putting out these fires in order to save lives and personal property, as well as the nation's natural resources, is the first priority of the Forest Service. The names of the second group of White Mountain National Forest personnel dispatched to the western fires are: John C. Anderson, Bethel; Robert Rooke, Dale Ken Allison, Jim Roman, Littleton, N. H.; Roger

FIRE-FIGHTING CREWS FROM WHITE MT. NATIONAL FOREST SENT TO WESTERN STATES

The forest fire emergency in the western states continues to worsen as some of the fires started by last week's dry lightning strikes have increased in size and are now burning out of control. New fires have started. Northern California has been added to the five-state emergency area of Montana, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Nevada.

The White Mountain National Forest was requested to send additional firefighters. A second contingent of 26 men were dispatched to the fires Tuesday, making a total of 41 men who have now left to help in the emergency. Forest Supervisor Paul D. Weingart designated Evans Notch Ranger District Ranger John C. Anderson as Party Chief in charge of the crew while in transit. The crew flew via charter flight from Portland to Boise, Idaho, making several stops enroute to pick up additional firefighters from other National Forests. They joined the many State and Federal firefighters already on the job.

The Boise Interagency Fire Coordinating Center, the first destination for these men, serves as the fire control center for the emergency area and has the responsibility of moving men and equipment to the areas where they are most needed. The new arrivals will be dispatched as needed, either to new fires or to relieve crews already on the job.

With no immediate relief in prospect, a third group of White Mountain National Forest personnel has been placed on "alert" for possible dispatch to the emergency area. It is hoped that it will not be necessary to send more manpower, but the people are ready if needed. GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Collie Morgan, Corres. —

Today I went to Button Island. For some time I had noticed this place completely covered with white flowers but had neglected to go to visit it. At one o'clock I set out in NYMPH to explore and to discover the cause of the "snow."

Just as I went down the bank where NYMPH waited to be pushed into the water "Joe Pye" greeted me giving variety to the intense hues which herald the coming of autumn. The tiny trumpet-shaped blossoms which make up the flower-heads may have suggested its common name of trumpet-weed.

Not far to the right grew the turtlehead as close to the water as it well could without getting its feet wet. Its appearance is such that its name seems fairly appropriate. Sometimes I have heard it called "white closed gullion." Mr. Bumble was eagerly entering the jaws going almost entirely from sight.

A short way up pond I noticed that far out the pond was still and mirrored sky and clouds; close in it stood aquiver with dancing beetle-crowds. The pond now is a gold mine for water beetles. I saw especially the hundreds of whirling whirling beetles. I thought about that wicked looking creature, the water giant, which I saw this spring when my sister-in-law brought it in a jar. He was about two and one half inches from head to tip and had a wicked beak for stabbing and sucking the blood of unlucky mosquito wigglers. This one I saw come from a farm pond and had tried his beak on the dog's nose.

A pattern border was painted along the stream; the red of the lovely cardinal flower, white streaks of the arrow heads, and the blue cyclus of the pickerel weeds. All harbored their reflections in the dark waters.

It was quiet on the pond except for a pair of ducks with their "teenagers" chattering back and forth among the lily pads which occasionally bowed their heads in tiny minuet.

I watched the swoop of a hawk far, far up in the realm of wings. I followed it until it circled and settled into the unfathomable blue of the sky. Then my attention returned to the matter at hand, the island.

As I approached I first saw the old nest of a blackbird then every where button bushes. Thousands of round buttons with a few still in bloom. The flowers are hard to describe, small, white, closely crowded to round button-like heads and they have a jasmine-like fragrance. I should have gone earlier when they were in full bloom.

In my return I fished a little, catching my line by a beaver dam and beneath an overhanging tree root where the water lay still and mysterious undisturbed by a rippling.

song, or never-ending murmur of a brook which leaps and plunges, splashes and eddies through the woods on its pilgrimage to the sea.

To the left another demure cardinal flower, this time attended by a hummingbird; both gazing enraptured at their reflection. I watched; truly feeling like a Peeping Tom.

Beyond stood the cool chaste beauty of the meadow rue. Its feathery graceful flower-clusters were erect and serene above other myriad blossoms by the water's edge.

Of course I should not omit the exquisite white water lily which calls for little description.

The pond is now full of algae; cat tails stand on guard.

A blue heron across from home stood statuesquely still, waiting.

I pulled NYMPH ashore, tossed my fishing pole which "Joe Pye" caught gracefully; turned over the boat, locked it and started for the house.

I thought, "Where has the summer gone?" All those other summers raced through my mind. I can still visualize clearly, nostalgically, the golden sunny days, summer showers, flowers, birds, trees, sights, sounds, odors, people, springs, brooks, trails, the warm golden high lights of evening, a woodland waterfall where a clear sandy bottom brook falls, moss covered rocks resembling cushions up-battered, the moon climbing into the sky slicing a path among the stars, the sun pulling itself above the horizon, white mists, whips of fog, sunsets, and I decided that I have had many good days such as I had today.

"God gives us sight that we may see
The spreading beauty of a tree;
The rising sun, a flaming dawn,
And diamond cobwebs on a lawn.
The tempest sea with billows high,
And lightning flashing in the sky;
The gentle river's flowing grace,
And ribbon clouds in moving lace.
A tiny flower made so small
And pine trees, standing, proud and tall;
A tranquil pond in mirror blue,
A rainbow arched through vapor dew.
A sunset red behind the hills,
The galaxy that midnight thrills;
The moon, the sun that meet at noon.
When night is o'er and day is born."
Gertrude Rudberg

NORTHWEST BETHEL

— Mrs. Louise B. Chapman, Corres. —
Summer is drawing to an end and thought there are many days left. The fields are now blanketed in snow for those winter nights. Clothing stores have exchanged their whites for woolen plaids, even in the mail you get a "back school" flyer, and even some letters are telling us fall is coming, as bright green gives way to hues of yellow, red and orange. I wonder many children anticipate the first day of school as much as I do. The shopping for just the right lunch box, with just the right card, and trying to talk your mother out of "those shoes are for kids" the night before the first day was exciting as the night before Christmas. The idea of new friends, new teachers, and new learning experiences were all surprise packages. The first day you put on your favorite new outfit, your shoes were still uncreased, your nose was permanent, although a little did look good, and holiday prize lunch box, Mom, would give a picture and put it in the photo album along with all those "first day of school" pictures you were always there in plenty to catch the bus, and if you were lucky enough to be on a party one, got the pick of the dessert really wanted, at least for a couple of days. The teacher was the one you ever had—for the first time at least! By the end of the first year your new outfit is used—maybe torn, your shoes are definitely creased, and you're cursing them for giving you blisters, and someone took your lunch box by mistake. The first day is over, but never forgot!

AIR POLLUTION AFFECTS TREES, TOO
Air pollution damage to white trees was the topic of discussion at a Maine Forestry Department training session held for state and federal foresters in Wiscasset. Dr. C. E. Granger, Director of the Department's Entomology Laboratory, Augusta, explained to the group that air pollution can weaken and eventually kill white pine trees.

According to Dr. Granger, pollution is again causing damage to eastern white pine in the forests. He said that symptoms of air pollution have been noted over 60 years but only recently the cause has been named.

In recent years the Foreign Department has been using two and susceptible strains of tobacco plants to assess the present air pollution in remote areas of E.E.C. Levels of air pollution which injure tobacco have been found in such remote areas as Algeiras.

Rangleley. The most severe injury to Maine forests came in Freeport, Wiscasset and Tenet areas. The Department placed tobacco plants throughout the experiment. Dr. George says that it now appears that the three pollutants are in various degrees of toxicity.

sulfur dioxide, ozone, and particulate fallout. Granger notes that while many trees are lost from the effects of air pollution in Maine, it is not anticipated that forests will be wiped out entirely. While pure trees may be damaged in their upper portions,

A prime example of pollution is the worst air for trees concerned is in the San Bernardino National Forest which Los Angeles
